SYNOPSIS

BRIEF SYNOPSIS
October 1965. Pamplona’s troupe of giant figures, a typical sight at the San Fermín festivities, is invited to parade along Fifth Avenue in New York. But not all of them will be allowed to appear: due to racial discrimination, the American authorities will ban the participation of the two black giants.

Based on this true event, Black Is Beltza tells the story of Manex, the young man responsible for carrying one of the giants. Embarked on a long, unexpected journey, Manex will witness key events in history: the race riots arising from the assassination of Malcolm X, the eccentricities of the characters in The Factory, the alliance between the Cuban secret service and the Black Panthers, and the proto-hippy psychedelia of the first music festivals.

EDITOR’S STATEMENT
Muguruza takes us on a heroic journey of initiation through time. An initiation because of the immersion in the customs of American society, the psychedelic madness of the incipient hippy culture and the sound track that accompanies them. A journey through time because in it we relive some of the most important events of that decade: the Cold War, the death of Che, the Francoist dictatorship... And, finally, heroic, because we are infected with Manex’s emotions, his revolution, his adventures and, let’s be honest, his passionate love for Amanda.
October 1965. Pamplona’s troupe of giant figures, a typical sight at the San Fermín festivities, is invited to parade along Fifth Avenue in New York. But not all of them will be allowed to appear: due to racial discrimination, the American authorities will ban the participation of the two black giants. Based on this historical incident, Muguruza will construct the story of Manex Unanue, the young man who was supposed to carry one of the black giants and who, disappointed with the decision of his companions to obey the order, decides not to go back home. The tale recounts, through this young man’s eyes, the events that marked the tumultuous society of the mid-60s: the race riots arising from the assassination of Malcolm X, the eccentricities of the characters in The Factory, the alliances between the Cuban secret service and the American Black Panthers, and the proto-hippy psychedelia of the first music festivals, the games of interests by spies on both sides during the Cold War, the spirit of Che in the Congo and Algeria and his death in Bolivia, and our own backyard: the grey, decrepit Francoist dictatorship.

After spending several years in Cuba where he will receive a varied training and meet Che before his journey to Bolivia, Manex will have to carry out a special mission: get a Black Panther who is in danger of being assassinated out of the United States and take him to Havana. To do this, he will have to take a roundabout route, as the CIA suspects that Cuba is involved in these kinds of actions, even on its own ground, so the route has to fool the Company’s agents who are located everywhere in the world.

An intriguing story that combines fiction with reality: it talks of love, revolution and espionage. And always in the background, a soundtrack that manifests itself in a descriptive way and transports us to that era.
DIRECTOR’S STATEMENT

I have known ever since I saw the photo taken in New York in 1965 depicting the troupe of giants of Pamplona, a typical image in the San Fermin festival, parading down New York’s 5th Avenue, and the caption stating that due to the situation of racial discrimination, the two black giants had been barred from participating in the parade, that there was a story to be had there.

Afterwards, during one of my visits to Cuba, I savoured the story of a secret mission, one of many told by one of its protagonists about how they had to carry out the secret services of the Cuban Intelligence Division at the end of the 1960s at the height of the cold war. It was an undercover operation to assist one of the movements which the Cuban revolution sympathised with and supported: The Black Panthers of the United States. I was told that in order to rescue an African-American militant, who according to counter-intelligence reports was going to be “taken out” by the CIA, the agents had to enter via Mexico, make contact with the militant in question in the United States and take him to Cuba, where he would be given political refugee status, and how they had to undertake a bizarre trip. A manoeuvre involving confusion and disorientation typical of that time so that the various secret services operating internationally would not be able to confirm their suspicions about Cuban involvement in the various warring groups that were emerging abroad.

The parade in New York, the secret operation led by Cuba, and the cities involved in the story set in 1967 started to twist and turn around our narration like the giants in the Pamplona parade during the San Fermin Festival: New York and The Factory, Harlem and the racial disturbances sparked by the death of Malcolm X, the Apollo Room and soul, with Muhammad Ali floating like a butterfly, stinging like a bee, Cuba and its Yoruba rhythms, Mexico and the infinite Juan Rulfo, Los Angeles and Tin Tan, the Monterey festival, the final of the Basque verse-making competition featuring Xalbador, San Francisco and Black Power, the Expo in Montreal and Charles de Gaulle, Algeria and Cheikha Rimitti, Madrid under the decrepit Franco dictatorship and the presence of Che, always Che. An intriguing story combining fiction with reality; one that speaks of espionage, revolution and love and hovering over everything was Vietnam, the 6-Day War, the KGB, the CIA, MOSSAD, the guerrillas in Bolivia, the liberation movements across the world, psychedelic drugs, sexual liberation and the revolution of orgasm, and above all, the music of Otis Redding: "Respect".

OST

Raul Fernandez Refree and Fermin Muguruza moved into a space in the Fabra i Coats Creation Factory in Sant Andreu (Barcelona), and constructed the film’s soundtrack, creating incidental pieces and songs with performances from various artists such as Maika Makovski, Anari, Iseo, Yacine, Amel Zen, The Sey Sisters, Ceci Bastida from Tijuana No!, Ana Tijoux and Manu Chao.

The soundtrack also includes cuts from the 60s, such as “He was really saying something” by The Velvelettes or the original Jamaican version of “You’re wondering now” by Andy and Joey, later covered by a multitude of bands such as The Specials or Amy Winehouse.
DIRECTOR’S CAREER HISTORY

Fermín Muguruza is undoubtedly one of the key figures on the international music panorama. Born in Irun, in the early 80s he founded one of the most influential groups on the Basque music scene: Kortatu. The band, very committed both politically and socially, first sang in Spanish and, as Muguruza gradually learned Basque, they sang in that language incorporating elements of ska, punk and reggae. At the end of the 80s, Fermin began a new stage, combining his work as radio presenter, editing the music program “Igo Bolumena” (Turn Up the Volume) on the now vanished Radio Egin, with creating his new band Negu Gorriak and concerts in Europe and America. In parallel, he created the label Esan Ozenki, which published his records and helped a large number of emerging bands. After 6 records, the group broke up and Fermin began a solo career filled with collaborations and incursions into various music styles such as reggae, funk, jazz and electronic. In 2003, he did the Jai Alai Katumbi Express world tour with Manu Chao, one of his best friends from the days of Kortatu, in which they played a mixture of songs from their extensive careers. After the international tour in 2004 with his own band, Fermin Muguruza Kontrabanda, in 2006 he signed with his new label TALKA for the record Euskal Herria Jamaika Clash. This was recorded in Jamaica and many of the top names from that country’s music scene collaborated on it. He then directed his first documentary Bass-que Culture, which showed the process of making the record in the Marley family’s studios. In 2008 he released what is to date his last studio record, Asthmatic Lion Sound systema, recorded in more than 20 different cities around the world, and he directed the documentary Checkpoint Rock: Songs from Palestine, which became one of the notable titles at the 2009 San Sebastian Film Festival. He also composed the soundtrack for the short film El salto de Beamon, he worked on the songs for the theatrical work Xomorroak (Bizitza Lorontzian/Bichitos (La Vida en el Tiesto), he composed the soundtrack of the fiction documentary by Jesús Garay, Mirant al Cel and during 2010 he directed the documentary series NEXT MUSIC STATION for the Al Jazeera Documentary Channel. Between 2011 and 2012, with Eider Rodríguez, he wrote, directed and produced the film ZULOAK (Holes) presented in 2012 at the San Sebastian International Film Festival in the Zabaltegí section. This film was seen both nationally and internationally and is still being shown in various countries around the world. In November 2014, he published a graphic novel, co-written with the author Harkaitz Cano and with illustrations by Jorge Alderete, called Black Is Beltza, which also became an exhibition in the Alhóndiga in Bilbao, visited by some 13,000 people in 2 months. In 2015 he expanded his interdisciplinarity, venturing into the world of musical theater along with the unclassifiable Albert Plá and the musician Raúl Fernández. With audiovisual work by the Nueveojos Audiovisual Studio and direction by Pepe Miravete, they opened the play Guerra at the Grec Festival in Barcelona and began a tour that continued during 2016.
2016 was the year of the project NOLA? Irun meets New Orleans, a work consisting of 10 themes from his extensive musical career with a New Orleans flavor and a documentary that gives a voice to the musicians who participated in the recording of the record so that they can talk about the situation in the city 10 years after Katrina.

After the presentation of various editions of the comic Black Is Beltza in France, Colombia, Japan and Algeria, he prepared the transfer of the exhibition for that year to the Santa Monica Creative Arts Center in Barcelona, where it remained from June 21 to July 31 2016. He was also in residence there, organizing various parallel activities. As part of that residence he invited musicians from New Orleans who, along with his regular Basque musicians, formed the Fermin Muguruza New Orleans Basque Orkestra, offering 5 concerts at the end of June and beginning of July. During that stay, he recorded a dub record, Arts Santa Monica sessions, on which the sound engineer was Chalart58.

In 2017 he lived in Sant Andreu (Barcelona), where he had a residence at the Fabra I Coats Creation Factory in Sant Andreu. His task was to compose the OST of the animation film Black Is Beltza and show the public what that process was like, also getting involved in the various festivals of literature, comics and cinema that were held in the same district. This residence also led to a collaboration with the Taller de Musics, which resulted in two concerts along with the female Micaela Chalmeta big band: one to celebrate the presentation of the Adarra award which the city of Donostia/San Sebastian gave to the artist for his career and another which took place within the Grec Festival in the month of July.

In his search for new sounds he worked with the electronic group The Suicide Of Western Culture with whom he edited the record B-Map 1917 + 100 in December 2017.

Homs is a comic artist and illustrator, born on May 15, 1975, in Barcelona. He began his career working as an illustrator for publicity and magazines until finally he moved into the world of the comic, his great vocation. In his early stages, he participated with short stories in fanzines and agency commissions, and even collaborated with a short story in a special edition of the legendary magazine “CIMOC” (2000). After several years publishing monthly in the Revists dels SUPERS (a Catalan children’s magazine) he decided to make the move to the United States. He drew several separate numbers for Marvel before making a mini-series of four editions for Red Sonja as a result of which the publishers entrusted him with a regular series of the popular warrior, and he drew one number a month for the next two years. In 2008, after the birth of his first child, he took another career turn, this time towards the European market where he felt more comfortable and decided to settle there. He worked for the Franco-Belgian publisher Dupuis, where he produced his first pages for the collective “La Vieille Dame Qui N’Avoir Jamais Joué Au Tennis” (2009) which gathered together the short stories by the writer Zidrou. For that same publisher he drew “L’Angélius” (2010-2011), a diptych, scripted by Frank Giroud and belonging to the series “Secrets”. After this he was offered the comic adaptation of the popular “Millenium” saga by Stieg Larsson. With Sylvain Runberg doing the script on this occasion, Homs created the style and graphic universe of the series and made volumes 1, 2 and 5 of the six that made up the adaptation. Finally in 2015 he made the move to the Dargaud publishing company to work on what, to date, is his most personal project. Joining forces again with the writer Zidrou, they constructed a new series called “SHI” (2017), a genre story set in Victorian London which has been very well received by public and critics and of which, to date, two volumes have been published.

MIKEL ANTERO
Prop design - Black is Beltza

Antero was born in 1980 in Oiartzun. He is a 2D animator, illustrator and director. With a passion for drawing since childhood, he decided to study Fine Arts in Lejoa, where he took his first steps in animation. He continued studying in Donosti, where he specialized and studied a masters in Animation and FX at the Sintesys School. He worked on ETB as an actor and later as a director of programs such as Hasiberriak, Goenkale and Vaya Semanita. Also, for El Terrat, he recorded, edited and postproduced the two-season series VHS and he collaborated with the guys on “Que vida más triste”. He created the animation specialty at the Kunsthal school in Irun, while developing his personal projects and creating his own animation and motion graphics studio UNDO.

He worked as director on the animated series YOKO from SOMUGA, as a concept artist for the film BLACK IS BELTZA by Fermín Muguruza, he edited the comic LAMI and is a regular comic artist on the magazine Gaztezulo. He has also taught several masterclasses on art and character and storyboard design for the University of Mondragón. He collaborated with Pintxo Developer and also with the international animation festival ANIMAKON and at present he is responsible for the animation specialty at the Kunsthal Scholle where he continues to teach animation and character design.
Born in Donostia in 1973, at the age of 20 he started in the Dibulitoon studio in Irun, working on numerous productions, both series and feature films, concentrating on character and storyboard design; Supertramps, Alex y Alexis, Maroons, Glup, Cristobal Molón. After twelve years he decided to give up animation for a long period until in 2015 he returned with the LOTURA studio to do the backgrounds of NUR eta HERENSUGEAREN TENPLUA.

In parallel with his animation work, he has devoted a great deal of his time to drawing comics, publishing a dozen albums, made and translated into several languages, and also countless collaborations on comic magazines; Heavy Metal, Spirou, Xabiroi, Penthouse Comics, etc. A large number of his comic books are written in Basque, always scripted by Harkaitz Cano, although it is in the Franco-Belgian market that he has done most of his production and his latest series VERDUN has obtained considerable success.
Nueveojos is devoted to audiovisual communication with a particular interest in the world of culture. They conceive this work from an auteurist perspective, so that each project constitutes an open creation space.

Since 2008, they provide a service for production companies, agencies, public institutions, artists and all kinds of creators.

The team consists of three directors, experts in post production and art direction, who collaborate with the best specialists and creatives. They approach production from a multidisciplinary, cooperative angle, so that each commission is a unique piece of communication.

In short, they communicate ideas with images.

Projects: Regular collaborators with Albert Pla: Guerra y Miedo among others. Different mappings on Casa Batlló, Love Batlló, La masia del Barça, F.C. Barcelona triple.
